

I used the "call rule" at my previous address and enjoyed the quiet time I had with my family. Since moving to a new address and having to sign up again for the "no call rule", I am once again bombarded with strangers who are rude and demanding. If these callers would like to share my phone bill and finish the things I don't get done because of their interruptions - then bring them on!